My Baby-boy.

Perhaps there is a mother among our readers who will read the following lines, and the home picture by Mrs. Stephenson which follows, without being happier in the possession of a baby-boy, but we do not believe it.

Come to my arms, you bewildering elf; Let me gather you body and soul to myself; Bury your scintillant eyes and hair, And all the glory and grace you wear, From twinkling feet to golden crown, Deep in the folds of my crimson gown; Clasping you close to my bosom and heart, A thing of my holiest being a part; Crooning a song in the olden rhyme, Tender and sweet as a vesper-chir

Sleep, baby-boy; The little birds rest, Downy and soft, The lambkins are safe In the shepherd's warm fold; The dew-drops asleep In the butter-cup's gold.

The violet nods To the daisy dream; The lily lies hushed On the lap of the stream And holy and calm, Like motherly eyes, The stars look down, From the silent skies

Sleep, baby-boy, My birdling, my flower, My lily, my lambkin, My dew-drop, my dower! While heart against heart Beats softly in time To the murmuring flow Of my tender old rhyme.
